CIA Developers Looks to Spur New Business Development

Offers $10,000 in free rent to Brevard's top Entrepreneur

MELBOURNE, Fla., December 15, 2009 – CIA Developers is pushing hard to encourage new companies to participate in their annual $10,000 Gary R. Cunningham Award. The company, which specializes in industrial and high-tech commercial development and property management, sees this as a great opportunity for an entrepreneur to take the first steps towards owning his or her own business.

“Until capital loosens up in the market, young companies will continue to have funding difficulties,” said Rick Kendust, Marketing & Leasing Coordinator for CIA Developers. “$10,000 that would normally go towards facility costs could instead be allocated to product development or some other investment into the company.”

The Gary R. Cunningham Award offers $10,000 in free rent at a CIA Developers' facility and a scholarship to the Technological Research & Development Authorities' Roadmap to Success. Applications and additional award information is available on CIA Developers' website, www.cia-developers.com.

“Giving a young company a chance to hang a sign over a door is only a small part of this award,” said Buz Anderson, CEO of CIA Developers. “The Roadmap to Success from TRDA gives them the tools they need to have long term sustainability”
